About

I am a representational painter based in Minneapolis seeking to extract elements of the natural world that often go unseen and unsung. As a self-taught artist, I strive to learn more about my artistic practice and stylistic preferences through every piece I create. I am drawn to representing modern landscapes, highlighting the interaction between man-made structures and the environment, and the emotional and physical impacts that they evoke. I combine my knowledge of traditional painting techniques, modern technology, and historical subject matter to create a body of work that is universally understood yet exclusively mine.
